SUMMARY

A possible military barracks area is located in the southern sector of Uryupinsk (Figure 1). It occupies 22 acres and contains a total of 29 buildings, including probable administration buildings, possible barracks, possible general storage buildings, several miscellaneous structures, and an athletic field. Directly southeast, a second area of approximately 10 acres contains 53 buildings, including probable administration, possible general storage, and miscellaneous buildings. Possible two- or three-family quarters form the south boundary of the area (Figures 2 and 3).

Although possibly a military barracks area, the heterogeneous building shapes and building placement, the central location within the city, and the absence of nearby training areas are features generally not associated with the strong signatures of military barracks areas.
